Court junks Atong trip to Cambodia

By Jocelyn R. Uy

SORRY, NO CAMBODIA TRIP FOR CHARLIE "Atong" Ang.

The Sandiganbayan Special Division has junked Ang's motion for reconsideration in which he asked the court for permission to travel to Cambodia, where a three-month consultancy job is awaiting him.

Ang, a consultant of the Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corp. in the Estrada administration, received a job offer last August from [illegible] Corporation, a company that operates a lottery in Cambodia.

The company cited his expertise in the numbers game and contended that he could help the business earn more.

Two months ago, the Special Division turned down Ang's request to travel abroad, pointing out that he, a probationer, might abandon the jurisdiction of the court.

Ang appeared before the court and explained why he needed to go abroad.

He said there was a need for him to inspect the site and observe how the company was running its lottery game so he could come up with a design to pick up the business.

"The company has been running the lottery game for six months now and it is going bankrupt," Ang had told the justices.

But in a resolution issued last Thursday, the antigraft court ruled that Ang could still do his job as a consultant by using teleconference facilities and the Internet.

"In this modern age of information technology, actual presence is dispensed with by the use of teleconference facilities and Internet access. The purpose of meeting with the officers of the [company] can be achieved by teleconference," the court said.

Ang was placed under a two-year probation in May, two months after the court convicted him of indirect bribery.

Taking note of Ang's "history," the court ruled that he was still a flight risk.

ability of the emir extending clemency to Ramos if Ms Arroyo interceded for her.

Only Ms Arroyo (and possibly Ermita) would seem to have an inkling of what lay ahead for Ramos.

State dinner with emir

Al Sabah will host a "state dinner" for Ms Arroyo, who will stay in Kuwait only for four hours. She is returning to Manila on Monday.

In Manila, Malacañang officials were keeping their fingers crossed.

"The President will go to Kuwait to talk to the emir of Kuwait on the case of Ramos," Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita said.

Ermita said that Ms Arroyo's trip to Kuwait was confirmed only last Thursday night.

Malacañang's prayer

"Humihingi [illegible] ng pagsusumamo ... Let's pray that President's visit with the emir of Kuwait would produce a good result," Ermita said.

Ms Arroyo, her husband Jose Miguel Arroyo and their children—Pampanga and Representatives [illegible] and Juan Miguel "Mikey" Arroyo, with their wives—along with a large presidential party visited France, Spain and the United Kingdom in a span of eight days.

Ms Arroyo's official visit to the UK ended Thursday (early morning in Manila). She and her family returned to Spain via Seville.

With her decision to fly to Kuwait, Ms Arroyo and her family would have to skip a scheduled tour of churches and historical landmarks in the ancient cities of Cordoba and Granada, home to monuments, cathedrals, palaces and mosques. With a report from Christine O. Avendaño

CIA destroyed 2 tapes showing interrogations

WASHINGTON—THE CENTRAL Intelligence Agency in 2005 destroyed at least two videotapes documenting the interrogation of two Qaida operatives in the agency's custody, a step it took in the midst of congressional and legal scrutiny about its secret detention program, according to current and former government officials.

The videotapes showed agency operatives in 2002 subjecting terrorism suspects—including Abu Zubaydah, the first detainee in CIA custody—to severe interrogation techniques. They were destroyed in part because officers were concerned that tapes showing harsh interrogation methods could expose agency officials to risk of legal jeopardy, several officials said.

In a statement to employees on Thursday, Gen. Michael V. Hayden, the CIA director, said that the decision to destroy the tapes was made "within the CIA" and that the reason was to protect the safety of undercover officers and because the tapes no longer had intelligence value.

The destruction of the tapes raises questions about whether agency officials withheld information from the courts and from the Sept. 11 commission about aspects of the program.

The recordings were not provided to a federal court hearing the case of the terror suspect Zacarias Moussaoui or to the Sept. 11 commission, which had made formal requests to the CIA for transcripts and other documentary evidence taken from interrogations.

The disclosures about the tapes are likely to reignite the debate over laws that allow the CIA to use interrogation practices more severe than those allowed in other agencies.

Hayden said that the agency had acted "in line with the law" and said he was informing CIA employees "because the press has learned" about the matter.

Hayden's statement said that the tapes posed a "serious security risk" and that if they had become public they would have exposed CIA officials "and their families to retaliation from al-Qaida and its sympathizers."

It was not clear who authorized the destruction of the tapes, but current and former government officials said the action was approved by officials within the CIA's clandestine service.

In both 2003 and 2005, CIA lawyers told prosecutors in the Moussaoui case that the CIA did not possess recordings of interrogations sought by the judge.

Paul Gimigliano, a CIA spokesperson, said that the court had sought tapes of "specific, named terrorists whose comments might have a bearing on the Moussaoui case" and that the videotapes destroyed were not of those individuals. NYT

'Dear Mr. Chairman': Bush writes to Kim

WASHINGTON—President Bush, directly engaging the man he publicly called a "tyrant," wrote a letter to North Korea's leader, Kim Jong Il, in which he held out the prospect of normalized relations with the United States if North Korea fully discloses its nuclear programs and dismantles its nuclear reactor, administration officials said Thursday. The high-level personal outreach from Bush to the leader of the country he placed in his "axis of evil" in 2002 was sent as US negotiators are struggling to get the secretive North Korean government to fully explain and disclose the extent, size and spread of its nuclear material and technology. At the same time, the United States is also urging other nations to maintain pressure on Iran in the wake of a new assessment that Tehran halted nuclear weapons work in 2003. Bush began with the salutation "Dear Mr. Chairman," and urged the enigmatic North Korean leader to reveal all of his country's past and present nuclear work. "I want to emphasize that the declaration must be complete and accurate if we are to continue our progress," the letter said, according to a senior administration official. NYT

2.38M people in US state, federal jails

ABOUT one in every 31 adults in the United States was in prison, in jail or on supervised release at the end of last year, the Department of Justice reported Wednesday. An estimated 2.38 million people were incarcerated in state and federal facilities, an increase of 2.8 percent over 2005, while a record 5 million people were on parole or probation, an increase of 1.8 percent. Immigration detention facilities had the greatest growth rate last year. The number of people held in Immigration and Customs Enforcement detention facilities grew 42 percent, to 14,482 from 10,104. The data reflect deep racial disparities in the nation's correctional institutions, with a record 905,600 black inmates in prisons and state and local jails. In several states, incarceration rates for blacks were more than 10 times the rate of whites. In Iowa, for example, blacks were imprisoned at 13.6 times the rate of whites, according to an analysis of the data by the Sentencing Project, a research and advocacy group. NYT

105 dead after blast in China mining region

SHANGHAI, CHINA—A GAS explosion at a coal mine in northern China late Wednesday killed at least 105 people in one of the country's worst mining accidents this year, the official Xinhua news agency said Friday.

The explosion occurred in the city of Linfen, about 240 miles south of Taiyuan, the capital of Shanxi province, in a huge coal-producing region. The official media reports said at least 15 other miners had been rescued or had escaped on their own. It was unclear how many people had been working in the mine at the time of the accident.

Many of the rescued miners were hospitalized after the explosion, which took place at a mine operated by the Ruizhiyuan Mining Co.

Xinhua reported that the blast occurred at 11:15 p.m. Wednesday, but that the local authorities were not told until 5 a.m. on Thursday. The death toll climbed during the day and reached 105 Friday after 38 bodies were recovered overnight.

The government said two mine officials, including the head of the mine, were being held by the police. Xinhua also reported that the accident may have been caused by illegal activity in an unauthorized area of the mine.

Coal mining accidents are a common occurrence in China, where on average more than 5,000 miners lose their lives every year, the worst accident rate in the world. Nearly every week, there are news reports of mining blasts, deaths, arrests of bosses and stories of miners trapped in horrific circumstances. By comparison, there are typically about 30 mining deaths a year in the United States. NYT

GA Sky Suites' embarks on landmark campaign

The new Globe Asiatique Sky Suites TV commercial defines the GA lifestyle.

It seemed that it was a just a while when we saw the three sky incasting grand launch of Manila's new landmark, the GA Sky Suites.

Credit that to Globe Asiatique, one of the country's reliable and pioneering real-estate developers.

Envisioned to be a landmark in the league of the famous towers in the world, GA Sky Suites would rise at the corner of the metropolis' two major thoroughfares Edsa and Quezon Avenue boasting a eco-friendly sky garden, a high-tech corporate tower and a post-modern building.

Now, the GA Sky Suites would be heading on another groundbreaking endeavor, a print and TV campaign which would showcase the kind of lifestyle one would have in a place which you can truly call home.

Nerissa Lee, vice president for international sales and marketing of Globe Asiatique, the developer of GA Sky Suites, shares that all real estate campaigns both in print and television always convey images of happy faces of families and amenities of the project. She says that since what will soon stand is a landmark, they believe that their campaign should also be something of a different scale.

"This new campaign would surely make people think and imagine what kind of life they would have because we would be showing the kind of lifestyle GA Sky Suites offers," she notes.

Lee adds that in the TV commercial, they would relate the idea that you don't have to be stuck in the usual condos.

"We know that your home affects everything in your life, including your work. At GA Sky Suites, what we're offering is a lifestyle, a home which one can essentially call a home and not a four-corner room with nothing but walls. We wanted to convey the idea that condos are not places which you would go to just to sleep."

Lee says that the project is a product of first hand knowledge of the needs of people whom Globe Asiatique has been dealing with throughout the years. It's also a conception of young, dynamic and talented young team of Globe Asiatique led by Lee who hopes to make a mark by creating something novel.

"It's a lifestyle that we're offering, not just mere space," she stresses.

Lee adds that they are coming up with a TV campaign that is out of ordinary since "it is part of thinking out of the box."

"We just don't want to follow what the others are doing. We'd rather take risks and experiment on new things. We know that starting a trend best suit Globe Asiatique," Lee explains.

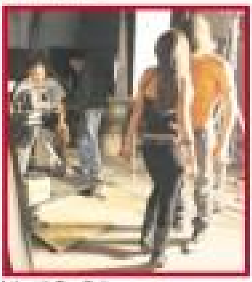

The TV campaign will be released towards the end of the month.

HUNGER leads to the dark side

Text and photos by Katrina A. Holigores

AS PART OF THE WORK I DO for my family's foundation, I took a trip recently to visit two of the projects that we have been supporting.

One of them I've taken a personal interest in—it's called the Learning for Living Foundation. This foundation's main focus is in the feeding and education of young children who come from families with little to no income.

About three years ago, I spent my birthday there and had friends and colleagues donate what they wanted. Donations included a clown act couple who volunteered their services for free to entertain the kids for the day.

During my most recent visit I was happy to see that the overall environment was still very clean, and that the children were all very well-groomed, active, and eating healthy food.

Creating optical illusions

Currently touring the streets of San Francisco, Red Cross' mobile billboard is hands-down imaginative. Part of the Red Cross' campaign for earthquake readiness (its most aggressive one to date), the provocative mobile billboards were designed to drive people to immediate action using traditional and nontraditional media, including viral and guerilla marketing tactics. The billboards show what busy areas might look like after a catastrophic earthquake, with downtown high-rises reduced to clouds of ash. Created by Publicis & Hal Riney, the campaign was built around the tagline "What do we have to do to get your attention?" The production on the next phase, which includes television ads, will begin next month.

"The only thing that seems to get people's attention is when a catastrophic event takes place somewhere in the world," says Harold Brooks, chief executive of the Red Cross Bay Area Chapter. "When that happens, we see more people coming in to buy a kit or enrolling to take a course. But when the event starts to fade from memory, the numbers go back down. So we wanted to do something that would stimulate people to get prepared even during peacetime."

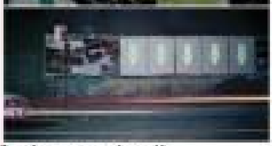

Counterculture strikes back

For better or for worse, there are times that present new and different ways of challenging people, systems, and notions. For the good of all—this is what rebellion should stand for.

It cannot be denied that [illegible], will serve as a good [illegible] out of our [illegible]. If so, then these five simple, little initiatives are good ideas, at the very least, we are beginning to use up the real [illegible] that we badly need.

I'M A NON-BELIEVER, YEAH, and I've blogged about it in detail a few times. But I can still appreciate the Christmas season for its emphasis on goodwill and togetherness. As an ex-Catholic, I still have vivid memories of Christmases past. Admittedly, I still find the imagery and symbols related to the holidays appealing, even when I don't believe in a messiah figure anymore. That's just how things are for me.

But you really can't escape the festivities, so while I'm not into "the reason for the season," I'm still appreciating the artistry and motivations that come with them. I'm also a strong, so I'm still part of the whole gift-giving scenario.

Just some months back, I planned to draw and post new Halloween drawings to [illegible] my site, but because of [illegible], I opted to draw a Christmas-themed set instead. I cut up hand-sized vellum paper in bulk, pulled out gel pens and markers and ended up with the following. Here's my take and thoughts on some holiday concepts.

Musical wars

MADONNA WAS one of the first artists who used it. Being the influential artist that she is, other musicians such as Sean Kingston, Dante, James Blunt, and Lily Allen have turned copycats and flogged it too.

Each day more and more musicians have realized the immense power of the Internet in sharing music. Imagine being heard not only in your home turf but also across the globe with just a click of a button!

The Internet is definitely a godsend especially for underground artists who want to reach out to more people. They're like diamonds in the rough—you know they sound amazing and you wish them to every gig.

If only they can be heard by more people then they can really make it big in the music scene. Thanks to Nokia's Independent Artists Club (IAC), these artists now have a shot at amplifying their music, and sharing it to a wider audience.

Powered by Nokia, the mobile music leader, IAC is meant to be the hub for new music from fresh homegrown talents in Asia. IAC gives new acts the means to be discovered by an audience of millions through its exclusive IAC chart. For music lovers, it's a hunting ground for fresh sounds, a place to download free music and vote for the tracks you want to see at the top of the charts.

This week, Super together with Independent Artists Club, lent their discerning ears to one of IAC's fastest rising Indie bands, Battle City.

BATTALION PROFILE

Angelo Estrella on lead vocals, Jason Barbola on guitar and Aldrich Barbola on bass. "We don't have a drummer yet so when we have a live gig, we get a sessionist."

CURRENT STATUS

"We just finished recording a self-produced six-song EP entitled "Fires & Embers" and are looking for distribution companies to officially release it."

THE JOY OF INDEPENDENCE

"You get to do whatever you want to do with your music. It's more fun when you have the freedom to experiment with tunes and not be pressured to create a "hit" song."

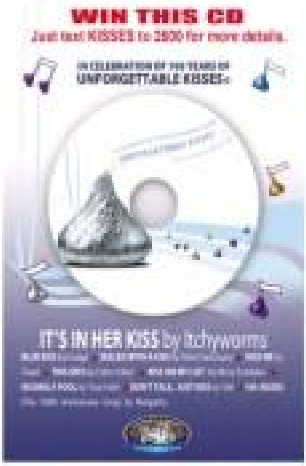

SOUND CONTROL

Their music is described as "a mishmash of diverse styles drawing from punk, new wave, jazz, folk, etc." And while the band doesn't necessarily stick to one particular genre, the sound resides closely to rock music. "Our songs show different sides to the band's personality. If you're listening to our music for the first time, 'Midnight Heart' would be a good starting point. It's a little bit more upbeat and accessible compared to our other stuff. And it being a love song doesn't hurt either."

Like Battle City, join the revolt! Sign up at the Independent Artists Club. To upload your songs, go to www.nokia-asia.com/iac/submission.

If you're just out to check the freshest tunes, you can even get the chance to bag a five-day trip for two to Sydney Australia for the Good Vibrations Festival on Feb. 16, 2008. Just register from Dec. 6, 2007 to Jan. 17, 2008 and vote for your favorite track. Also up for grabs are two Nokia 5310 XpressMusic phones and two Nokia 5610 XpressMusic phones.

Get on board and visit the IAC website now at www.nokia.com.ph/iac.

By Katrina R. Holigores

CATCHING UP WITH Marc Nelson is no easy feat.

The current star of Sports Unlimited and dancing Boys Asia Season 2 doesn't seem to run out of energy. But even with the busiest of schedules, jetting in and out of Manila, he remains professional and friendly—even reaching out a hand during the controversial "coup" attempt at the Manila Peninsula, warning people not to pass by traffic-jammed Ayala Avenue.

When asked what other activities he's involved in, he mentions that he supports The Kythe Foundation for kids with cancer, World Vision and Every Day is your Birthday Foundation.

As his personal goals, he says, "My goal is to get people active and healthy, and make Pinoys realize what a fantastic and beautiful country they live in."

The best way to catch up with Marc Nelson is to give him a camera—to see what he does, and hope that there is enough film in it to keep up.

See Marc Nelson on Sports Unlimited every Saturday night 11:45 p.m. on ABS-CBN and on dancing Boys Asia every Thursday night at 8 p.m. on AXN.

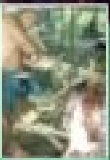

A VIEW of Boracay

THE BEST place for breakfast in Boracay: "Real Coffee"

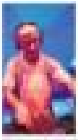

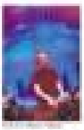

FISH GO DEEP, TRACY K AND DJ FUDGE HANG OUT IN THE CHILL ZONE

The Manila club scene exploded with the convergence of three international musical acts on one spectacular night: PHILIP MORRIS MENTHOL KING SIZE featured Fish Go Deep's Shane Johnson, Tracy K, and 'French Touch' veteran DJ Fudge at the latest installment of its uberstylish party series Chill Zone. Held at the expansive A. Venue Events Hall, the hip and happening partied down with an all-night open bar in an incredible atmosphere laced with the coolest tunes.

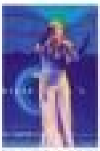

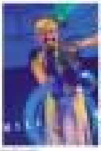

All three artists found their musical careers early: Tracy K, or Tracy Kelliher says she's been singing "as long as she can remember" and recalls writing her first song with a friend when she was just five years old. Barcelona-based Parisian DJ Fudge has organized parties in Paris since he was 16, which is how he discovered his love for mixing disco with funk. Shane Johnson, on the other hand, grew up in a house "full of music" as his father was an avid jazz fan.

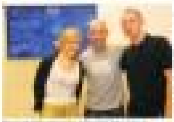

"I can't think of any other thing I'd rather be doing than this," says Shane. "How I felt about it [growing up] is still how I feel about it now." Evident in his 20 year collaboration with Greg Dowling, Shane's passion for music has resulted in worldwide hits such as "Lil' Hand", "Nights Like These" and UK Chart burner "The Cure and The Cause."

A longtime Fish Go Deep collaborator, Tracy K performs full-tilt onstage but proves she's hardly a diva when it comes to the creative process. "Everything comes from the heart," she says, "I don't write about anything I don't know—and I think that's what people respond to." A keen writer of poetry and prose, she takes inspiration from her own personal experiences.

Fudge, on the other hand, finds inspiration through his many travels as a sought-after DJ. "Different places, memorable gigs -- all of that goes into the music," he says. "I take my inspiration from anything. For example, a gig in Brazil exposed me to the rhythmic percussion style of steel drum bands. I think, maybe I can do something with this, you know?"

Shane maintains the importance of having artistic control of the music. "Producing gives us the opportunity to test our material immediately," says Shane. "We can take them straight from the studio to the club to see what works and what doesn't." DJ Fudge agrees. "It is very important for an artist to be in complete control of what he makes," says Fudge. "Music can never be boring if you continue to improve. I will never stop making music."

And that is exactly what an eager global audience can hope for from these enduring hitmakers. So the next time PHILIP MORRIS MENTHOL KING SIZE lays the Chill Zone scene, expect nothing less than to party with the best in this circle where the vibe is cooler than ever.

SMART launches OFW SIM in Spain, Madrid

November 10 was a special occasion to thousands of Overseas Filipino Workers making a living in Europe. SMART, once more, broke communication barriers as the telco giant unveiled the OFW SIM.

Raffles and contests were held during the event where exciting gifts and prizes were given away. The highlight of the night was when Martin Nievera and Rachel Alejandro put on an amazing show much to the delight of our beloved OFWs. Another part of the program that raised their spirits was the launch of the actual SIM, which allows them to stay connected to their loved ones back here in the Philippines. "Ok itong OFW SIM at Bitten ko na mga officemates ko..." said a very grateful attendee. The event was truly a memorable one for OFWs in Europe, which was a product of SMART's ingenuity and sincere objective to serve Filipinos here and abroad.
